

Dear Parents,

I would like to inform you that our school has been selected as Junior Achiever by Atlanta Magazine. Congratulations to all students, parents and teachers. Please see the details below.

Atlanta Magazine has profiled eight Fulton County high schools in its January 2009 issue featuring metro Atlanta's best high schools.

The magazine compared course offerings, facilities, extracurricular activities, awards and SAT performance. Results were reported across a broad spectrum of categories to include general academics, math, science, language arts, performing/visual arts and sports. Ten schools – both public and private – were profiled in each category.

Additionally, the magazine compiled a list of "All-Around" achievers, which are schools that excel in three or more of the categories. Of the 14 "All-Around" finalists, five were from Fulton County, while seven were private schools and two were other public schools.

The following is a listing of the categories and the Fulton County high schools recognized. The magazine also profiled "Junior Achievers," which are elementary or middle schools that have standout academic programs that successfully prepare students for high school. Fulton Science Academy is the only school recognized under "Junior Achiever" category in Fulton County by Atlanta Magazine.

All-Around

Alpharetta High School
Chattahoochee High School
Milton High School
Northview High School
Roswell High School

Math and Science

Centennial High School
North Springs High School

Language Arts

Centennial High School
North Springs High School

The Arts

North Springs High School
Tri-Cities High School

Sports

Centennial High School

Junior Achiever

Fulton Science Academy